Folke Rydén has won numerous international awards for his work as a reporter, producer and director. His documentaries have been aired around the world.

Folke Rydén was born in 1958 in Uppsala, Sweden. With an MA in journalism from the University of Stockholm, he began working for Swedish national television in 1982.

After a decade as a foreign correspondent, including seven years in Washington, USA, he is now based in Stockholm, Sweden.

In 1995 Folke Rydén founded FRP AB, an independent production company producing film & television for the international market in current affairs, social issues, human rights, history, politics, science, environmental issues and sports.

Productions have been aired by more than 40 broadcasters, shown in over 30 countries and have garnered dozens of international awards.

In 1993, Folke Rydén was honoured with the Bonnier Grand Prize in journalism - Sweden's highest award for excellence in journalism.

The company is currently involved in documentaries, cinema releases and television series.

On a non-profit basis, FRP promotes and supports young and creative talent by acting as an executive producer for a range of various film and television projects.

Folke Rydén is also a popular lecturer, public speaker and moderator. In his characteristic way, he inspires audiences with talks about a rapidly changing world from his perspective as a reporter and filmmaker.

Furthermore, Folke Rydén is a five-time national skydiving champion.
